

Giving voice to spousal caregivers...

Raising awareness about caregiving partners!

Thinking about being a spousal caregiver never came to my mind as it is not my job. I think that supporting my wife is a husband's duty. I don't get paid for it, which is another reason why I've never associated myself as a spousal caregiver.

...But I am

The best thing you can ever give to a chronically ill partner is your unconditional love and support...

LUCJAN

For every chronically ill person there is an army of partners who support them...

You don't require a specific degree of illness. If your life is impacted by the health of your loved one, and you provide care to your partner you're a spousal caregiver.

Behind this simple definition is a whole world of experiences that no other marriages have.
