

What does endometriosis pain actually feel like?

WHAT DOES ENDOMETRIOSIS PAIN ACTUALLY FEEL LIKE?

Endometriosis pain varies from person to person. Pain might start before or during a period lasting several days or be short. It can feel sharp, stabbing, or feel like your insides are being pulled down. Endometriosis can cause pain in more than one area of your body.

01

WHAT ARE THE TYPES OF ENDOMETRIOSIS PAIN?

Endometriosis pain has different types, including sharp or razor-like, short or lasting, stabbing, pulling, localized like in your lower tummy or back (pelvic pain), or pain in more than one area of your body, pain during sex, pain after sex, when peeing (bladder pain), when pooing (rectal pain).

02

HOW TO EXPLAIN ENDO PAIN TO A GUY?

The most noticeable symptom of endometriosis is pelvic pain although it radiates to other parts of the body. Most women experience cramping during their periods which increases over time and it is very difficult to bear, leading women to hospital in need of strong pain relief.

03

MY EXPLANATION ON WHAT DOES ENDO PAIN FEELS LIKE>

Imagine your testicles being squeezed in a vice. This vice tightens within each second, it tightens to the point that you feel like you are going to faint from the pain. You have this vice attached to your balls for minutes, even hours at the time. Wouldn't that make you feel terrible?

04

Find out more at:
WWW.WORRYHEAD.COM